

Mark Making Sequin Grass Board

Product Code: EY11363

A sparkly flourish of vegetation to add to your displays whilst creating an interactive surface to support children's fine motor skills. Stroke to reveal a new colour giving children a sense of curiosity.

- These fantastic grass boards offer children the opportunity to have their sense of curiosity catered for as they reveal the hidden colour beneath.
- Children will enjoy stroking the sequins in therapeutic actions. Some children may isolate single digits whilst other children will use their full hand to explore to develop their fine motor skills. You could offer children a selection of different tools to create marks such as paintbrushes and sticks.
- You could use these grass boards to create autumnal, spring, winter and summer displays. Use this as an opportunity to explore the different seasons. For an autumn display perhaps you could take the children on a walk (risk assess) to find different items such as conkers, acorns and leaves of red and orange. Talk to the children about the changes and to support their knowledge of our world. Perhaps you may find a hedgehog on your walk, take recording devices to take photographs or videos so the children can document their findings.
- Why not use these sparkly grass boards alongside 'We're Going on a Bear Hunt' by Michael Rosen. You could encourage the children to move around the room in different ways, through the swishy grass and tip toeing through the dark cave. Say the words aloud for the children to repeat, encourage them to think about what may come next, is it the mud, the snow? This supports their early literacy skills.
- You can use these sequin boards alongside the butterflies and dragonflies, the dinosaurs and the daisies to create an immersive and interactive display for children.
